LINCOLN INTERNATIONAL

Market Update

Market Insights

M&A activity in the waste services market remains strong and Lincoln International expects the high pace of consolidation activity to continue in 2020 given strong underlying industry fundamentals, continued growth in the broader economy, low capital gains rates and borrower-friendly credit markets. M&A and public market valuations in the waste services market also remain at record levels.

Strategic buyer acquisition activity has remained elevated in recent months as large consolidators continue to pursue M&A to augment single-digit organic growth. Recent examples include GFL Environmental's acquisitions of AGI Environmental, County Waste of Virginia and American Waste, Waste Connections' acquisition of Penn Waste and Republic Services' acquisition of Devens Recycling. Generally speaking, these deals will enable the acquiror to achieve geographic expansion, broaden service capabilities, add new customers and secure talent, and will result in meaningful revenue and cost synergies.

Valuations of large public waste services companies remain high, supporting the ability to complete acquisitions at accretive prices. At year-end 2019, the public market waste services providers were trading, on average, at approximately 92% of their 52-week highs and an EV / EBITDA multiple of over 14.5x. Republic Services announced plans to spend $200 million on acquisitions in 2020, down from 2019 but signaling another strong year compared to more typical levels of around $100 million. Further, Waste Connections reported in October that it had extended acquisition bids worth more than $600 million since July, a portion of which was expected to be completed in 2020. Based on expectations of large industry players and the pending deal by Waste Management to acquire Advanced Disposal Services, many industry observers expect the pace of strategic acquisitions to remain high and to exceed 2019 levels.

Similarly, the waste services market remains highly attractive to private equity funds as they look to invest in sectors with acyclical or non-discretionary demand drivers, especially given the potential slowdown of an economy that has seen the longest period of expansion in history. Further, private equity funds in pursuit of buy-and-build strategies are expected to remain active given the highly fragmented nature of the waste services market and ample opportunities for geographic or service offering expansion. Private equity will continue to pay a premium for well-managed, recession-resistant companies experiencing outsized growth. Notable recent private equity acquisitions include TPG Growth's acquisition of Denali Water Solutions and Arcapita's acquisition of Waste Harmonics.

Lincoln International expects M&A volume and valuations to remain strong for the foreseeable future. Given antitrust scrutiny expected for Waste Management's $4.9 billion pending acquisition of Advanced Disposal Services, both parties have agreed to sell assets that would reduce combined annual revenue by up to $200 million if required

GFL Environmental, the Canadian-based provider of solid waste management, announced in November 2019 that it would cancel its previously anticipated IPO after failing to receive institutional investor support at a price in line with shareholders' views of fair value

FCC Environmental Services, one of the world's largest waste management and recycling companies, which first established a presence in the U.S. in 2014, announced that it will be seeking U.S. acquisitions located in the South, Southeast and Midwest regions Municipal solid waste pricing increased over the course of 2019 and is expected to remain stable in 2020, supported by higher landfill costs, while solid waste volumes are expected to be flatto-up

While recycled commodity prices fell during 2019, prices stabilized during the second half and into January 2020, though industry participants are hesitant to predict a rebound just yet

Two complementary recycling-related bills aimed at bringing additional funding to materials recovery initiatives were introduced in November 2019 – Recycling Enhancements to Collection and Yield through Customer Learning and Education Act (RECYCLE) and Realizing the Economic Opportunities and Values of Expanding Recycling Act (RECOVER) – both of which have gained support from groups in the waste and recycling, plastics and glass industries
